To whom it may concern:
White House Council on Environmental Quality
Task Force (National Environmental Policy Act) (NEPA),

In the case of the NEPA I don't approve of the alterations being made. When it comes to restrictions on projects that can be hazardous to the environment "red tape" is a must. It is a compromise with no set backs to the third party. Any change would ~~[illegible]~~ only give rise to new environmental problems and issues. While this does help with economical growth the harm done to the utilized land is unbalanced in proportion.

Thank you,
J. R. Norris
